
Anti-age products

I am getting a bit bored of all the products currently advertised which claim they prevent ageing. As this has never been proved, I wonder how companies can get away with playing on people's emotions...seriously we all get old and should just chill rather than waste money on products that probably will make no difference...

As a man, I'm not quite as targeted as women (sorry ladies), but I'm sure it won't be long

How do these companies get away with this type of marketing?
